

Educating our Nonprofit Sector Workforce

A Roundtable discussion for educational providers of the nonprofit sector

The strength of Calgary's Nonprofit Sector is firmly rooted in the passion, commitment and expertise of its staff and volunteers. Yet attracting and retaining qualified personnel has become one of the greatest challenges facing the sector today. As the needs of the sector change, education providers and institutions must also adapt to address these changing conditions. The Calgary Human Resource Initiative is a collective undertaking of local nonprofit organizations, funders, government and educational institutions developing long term sustainable actions to address human resource issues in Calgary human service nonprofit organizations.

As a part of our commitment to engage key sector stakeholders and increase awareness of the needs of the sector, we invite you to a facilitated roundtable discussion session with representatives of educational institutions and organizations. The focus of this session will be to discuss cross sectoral issues, trends and strategies with institutions engaged in providing training and education for the nonprofit human service sector workforce and explore possibilities in program development and research.

This session is sponsored by the United Way and the Calgary HR Initiative and open to all institutions and organizations providing training and education for the human services nonprofit sector.
